Air Force National Association for Stock Car Racing meets flightline operations at Dover Air Force Base, Del. Along with Staff Sgt. David Vollmer, 355th Transportation Squadron, members of the 436th Airlift Wing, Dover, change a tire on No. 21, the U.S. Air Force sponsored NASCAR motorcraft for a "reverse pit stop"

Sept. 19. The members of the No. 21 team showed the members of the 436th Eagle Wing how to perform a pit stop on the racecar. The No. 21 NASCAR sports the "Air Force bomber" paint scheme and raced Sept. 22 at Dover Downs International Speedway. See feature on Page 12.

Projected deployment information fits inside wallets

By Capt. Amie Brockway
Air Combat Command Public Affairs

The projected deployment information of Air Combat Command's personnel can fit inside members' wallets thanks to the new Aerospace Expeditionary Force identification card available at AEF On-line.

The AEF Center recently introduced the cards as a way to help airmen understand the details of their deployments.

"The cards were designed because many airmen don't know when they are deploying," said Master Sgt. Tonya Brinkley, the NCO in charge of Web site development and maintenance for the center. "They can now be more aware of the details so they can plan better and get the training they need to deploy."

A visit to AEF on-line results in a personalized card that can be printed on any printer and kept in a wallet or purse. People should see their unit deployment managers to receive their cards, which take only a few minutes to complete, Brinkley said.

The card tells airmen what AEFs they belong to and their individual unit type codes. The UTC is a code that, when referenced on AEF On-line, lists the duties an individual will be required to perform for a deployment. On the back of the card, airmen will find the AEF cycle chart and addresses of Web sites that can Supporting each other and working together to provide the best programs and services is a goal for all D-M people. Ideas, suggestions, comments, concerns and kudos are important to make improvements. The best way to pass along a comment or to get an answer to a concern is to contact the agency chief or functional managers listed here. Still no solution? The Commander's Corner phone line is 228-4747. An e-mail can also be sent to: 355thWing.CommandersCorner@dm.af.mil.

Callers must leave their name, phone number and a message. They will receive a prompt reply in writing or by telephone. We will honor caller confidentiality, but sometimes we need to contact callers to gather additional information. If a concern is of general interest to the base populace, the response may be published in the Desert Airman. Anonymous calls may not be published.

Team D-M Mission Spotlight

The base commissary's goal is to achieve unprecedented efficiency in military grocery sales and to provide better service to its customers. It strives to do this by offering high-quality products at the best price. Defense Commissary Agency has devised a set of standardized floor plans, simplifying stocking procedures and regionalizing stock lists. Headquarters controls item additions and deletions and only items on the stock list are authorized for stocking the Davis-Monthan Air Force Base commissary.

DeCA has significantly reduced the stock in warehouses in an effort to increase efficiency and reduce operating costs. This means it operates without warehouse stock on many products, relying instead on daily deliveries and shelf restocking.

DeCA also operates a miniature commissary by the main commissary. It is open seven days a week except for holidays.

Officials stress importance of quality-of-life surveys

More than 117,000 Air Force people around the world are being given the opportunity to address their quality-of-life concerns by completing the 2002 Chief of Staff Quality of Life survey.

"We have sent 67,500 surveys via e-mail to people already, and anticipate sending out between 8,000 and 10,000 each day," said Charles Hamilton, chief of the Air Force Personnel Center's survey branch at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas.

While recipients are asked to complete the survey within two to three days of receiving the e-mail, so far the response has not been what officials had hoped for, Hamilton said.

"We've received only a little over 18,000, or 27 percent, of the surveys back," he said.

"Overall, we need to have about a 40 percent return rate to be able to accurately talk about issues affecting specific demographic groups. The more surveys received, the more accurate our data."

Senior Air Force leaders take these surveys very seriously and use the information gathered to develop new programs and initiatives to meet their people's needs, said Lt. Col. Frank Pombar, chief of the Air Force quality-of-life programs branch at the Pentagon.

Answering survey questions honestly is key to providing these leaders with the most accurate picture of current quality-of-life concerns, Pombar said.

The last survey was conducted in 1999 and gave senior leaders insight into Air Force people's career intent, job satisfaction, opinions on the fairness of pay and retirement benefits, and satisfaction with health care, housing, education opportunities and current ops tempo.

Housing is one area where survey results have influenced decision making at the Pentagon, Pombar said.

Survey data showing concerns in this area were big factors in the Air Force funding for $544 million to improve or replace more than 13,000 military family houses and $156 million to build more than 1,600 new dormitory rooms in fiscal 2002.

Previous surveys also highlighted fitness centers and programs as top retention factors for the Air Force.

The feedback led the Air Force to fund $183 million to build or renovate 22 fitness centers through out the Air Force in fiscal 2000 through 2005, with congressional support adding an additional $130 million.

Hamilton said people who have received the survey but have not completed it within the three-day window will be receiving a follow-up e-mail reminder.

The reminder contains a link to the survey for people who may no longer have the original message and gives them another chance to complete the survey.

Out with a bang

Fourty-second Airborne Command and Control Squadron aircraft pass under a water canopy as they finish their final flight as a 42nd ACCS aircraft. This squadron is going out with a bang by giving a pool of leftover funds from their maintenance and operations flight to the Airman's Attic. A check in the amount of $1,000 was presented to Col. Paul Schafer, 355th Wing from the 42nd ACCS Sept. 14.

Extended duty child care available for members returning from deployments

As of Sept. 1, Air Force active-duty, Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve members returning from deployments in support of Operation Enduring Freedom may receive a limited amount of free child care upon their return to their home station and their family. The care will be provided in one of Davis-Monthan's two extended duty family child care homes on base. These homes are currently under contract as part of an Air Force services initiative to support members required to work extended hours.

The care will be provided on a space available basis and is limited to no more than 16 hours of care per child and to children ages 12 years and younger. If care is not available when first requested, the family child care coordinator will attempt to make arrangements to have it provided at a later date. Only members returning from deployments that were 30 days or more in length are eligible to use this service. The care must be used within 30 days of the return from the deployment unless the program is not able to offer it during that time. The Family Child Care Office will verify members' eligibility to use the free care with the 355th Military Personnel Flight prior to reserving care for the family.

To schedule care or to ask questions about the program, contact Linda Ray, D-M's family child care coordinator, at 228-2201 or the Family Member Programs flight chief at 228-2335.

News Notes

Domestic violence story update

In reference to the Aug. 29 Desert Airman article, "Stop domestic violence before it starts, know the signs," the 355th Wing Public Affairs Office has received updated information. Although the 355th Medical Group Family Advocacy office may log more than 70 cumulative calls of varying types, the number of calls each week related to domestic violence is zero to three. Many of these domestic violence claims, upon further investigation, are found to be unsubstantiated.

Dry cleaner's new hours

The base exchange dry cleaners will be opening at 7 a.m. Monday through Friday until Nov. 15 for those who wish to drop off or pick up items on the way to work. If the dry cleaners generate sufficient business, these hours will be permanent.

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed for the Special Olympics Pima County 2002 bowling competition to assist with monitoring lanes, scoring and other tasks. The events take place Oct. 24 through 26 with two sessions each day. For more information, call William Anderson, 25th Operational Weather Squadron Special Olympics volunteer coordinator at 228-6680.

White House fellowship program

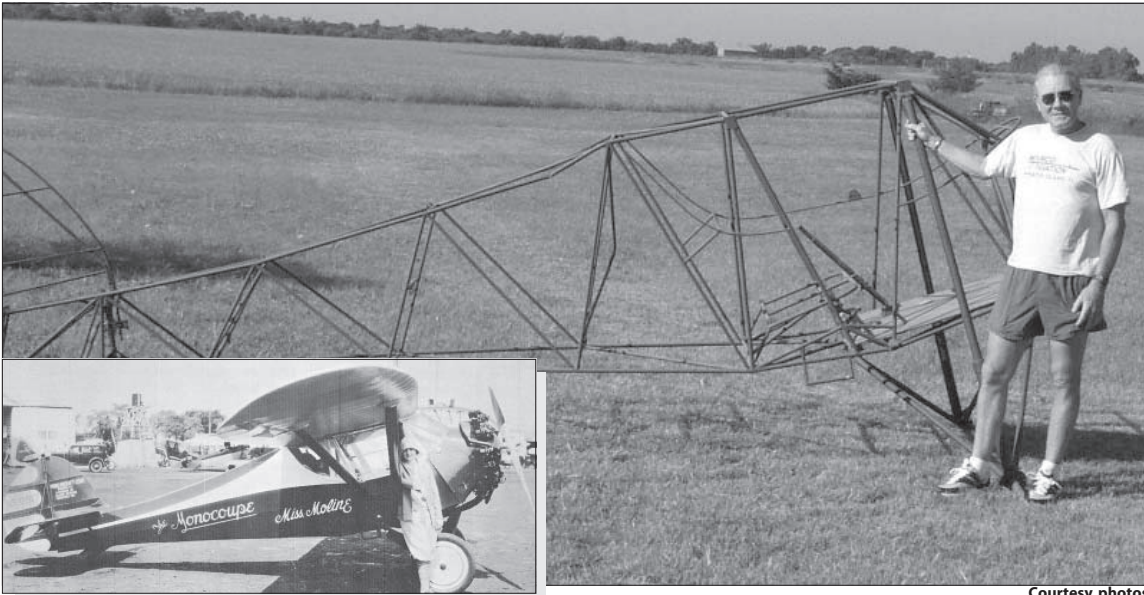

All U. S. citizens (except federally employed civilians) are eligible to apply for the White House fellowship program. This program seeks to provide exceptionally promising people from throughout the nation with first hand experience in the process of governing our nation. Interested citizens can get more information at www.whitehousefellows.gov.

Claims Office appointments

The 355th Wing Claims Office will not be taking walk-ins or making appointments until Oct 1 due to fiscal year change over. For more information, call Staff Sgt. Chasity White at 228-6440.

Dormitory project

For the dormitory project, Kachina Street between Seventh and Eighth streets will be closed permanently to all traffic other than emergency vehicles. Seventh Street entrances to the parking lot north of Bldg. 2510 will be permanently closed. The parking lot will be accessed from Eighth Street using a temporary road, which will be maintained throughout construction and become permanent.

The lower picture was taken around 1930 with Phoebe Fairgrave Omlie, the owner at the time. The big picture was taken this year in Cheny, Kan. They are the same aircraft. Davis-Monthan airfield history to be highlighted

By Staff Sgt. Russell Wicke
355th Wing Public Affairs

An article about the Davis-Monthan Airfield will appear in Sport Aviation magazine during the Centennial Year of powered flight in 2003. It will be written by Gary Hyatt, a commercial pilot and member of the Professional Aircraft Maintenance Association who gathered information at 1925, to Nov. 25, 1936, including 56 landings by 40 female pilots," said Hyatt. "It also includes signatures of 38 of the 40 finishers in Class A, B and C of the 1928 National Air Races." The National Air Races became the largest sporting event of its day and drew world attention to the rapidly expanding field of aviation according to www.clevelandairshow.com.

This time period is considered the Golden Age of Flight.

Hyatt traveled here from his home in Marco Island, Fla., to study the original D-M Airfield transient log in order to get information that was unreadable from his copy. "I've been able to resolve about three-dozen items since I've been here that were unreadable to me before," said Hyatt.

Hyatt believes this transient log to be an important piece of history for the aviation industry. Since discovering it, he has made personal contact with three people who signed the log. Hyatt has been busy doing more than locating people who left their mark in this log, however.

"I spent four months going cross-eyed hand typing a computerized database copy of this log," said Hyatt. With this database he can find any name within moments if it was ever in the log to begin with.

"I also plan to construct a Web site to make my findings and this database available on the World Wide Web," he said.

Contact is welcome from others interested in the Golden Age of Flight and may add insight to aircraft and the history of the D-M Airfield at www.dmairfield.com and e-mail at dmairfield@aol.com.

give them more pre-deployment information.

"Commanders must ensure their airmen are assigned to UTCs, aligned with an AEF and trained-to-task to perform the UTC's mission," said Brig. Gen. Al Peck, AEF Center commander.

"There are a variety of tools available to commanders to assist them, like the AEF On-line Web site and the AEF UTC reporting tool, which tracks the ability of wings to meet their expeditionary requirements. The AEF ID card is one more tool they can use to keep their people informed."

The idea for an AEF ID card was adapted from cards already in use by the ACC directorate of communications and information systems and a few other organizations, Peck said. "We designed the cards to be user-friendly and contain the information people want to know. The AEF is designed to offer more predictability and stability to our airmen and their families. If our people take the time to get this card, much of their essential deployment information will be at their fingertips, making deployment planning much easier."

"My goal is to provide every airman with as much notification and information on their deployment as possible," said Gen. Hal Hornburg, ACC commander. "I'd like to see every ACC airman have his or her own AEF ID card within the next 30 days. I've asked my commanders, first sergeants and supervisors to help their folks make this happen."

The card can be found at <https://aefcenter.acc.af.mil/AEFC/idcard.htm>. Airmen can find answers to other deployment-related questions at AEF On-line, located at <https://aefcenter.acc.af.mil/eafonline>. Both sites must be accessed from computers in the dot-mil domain.

Senate confirms new Air Force surgeon general; nominated by president

By G.W. Pomeroy
Air Force Surgeon General
Public Affairs

The Senate has confirmed Maj. Gen. (Dr.) George Taylor Jr. to serve as the Air Force's 19th surgeon general.

Earlier this month, he was nominated by President George Bush to replace Lt. Gen. (Dr.) Paul Carlton Jr., who retired Monday.

"This is certainly a huge honor," Taylor said.

"As our Air Force continues its tradition of transformation, I look forward to working hard in improving the capabilities of our aerospace expeditionary forces. As importantly, I am eager to continue our efforts to improve the health of our military families: active [duty], Guard, Reserve and retired."

Taylor, 49, was born in Birmingham, Ala., and graduated from Rice University with degrees in physics and Russian language. He was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Air Force Reserve through the Health Professions Scholarship Program. Following medical school and an internship, he entered active duty in 1979 as a flight surgeon assigned to an F-15 Eagle squadron at Kadena Air Base, Japan.

He is a chief flight surgeon and is board certified in aerospace medicine by the American Board of Preventive Medicine.

In 1980, Taylor received the Malcolm Grow Award as the Air Force's Flight Surgeon of the Year. In 1999, Taylor received the first TRICARE Management Activity Executive Director's Award.

He was the command surgeon with U.S. Air Force in Europe at Ramstein AB, Germany, where he served as the TRICARE regional director for Europe for one year.

In addition, he was the Air Force's forward surgeon during Operations Allied Force in Albania and Shining Hope in Kosovo.

12th Air Force commander bids farewell to 41st, 43rd ECS

On behalf of the men and women of 12th Air Force, we bid farewell to the 41st and 43rd Electronic Combat Squadrons from the 12th Air Force family. I want to personally thank each and every one of you for upholding the proud traditions of 12th Air Force, both at home and overseas, ensuring the protection of our great nation.

For 60 years, our Airmen have provided freedom and protection to the United States. Beginning in World War II with the invasion of North Africa, to Vietnam where we were the primary source for tactical fighter, reconnaissance and airlift forces in that theater, and now Operation Enduring Freedom's War on Terrorism and the ongoing war on drugs in South America, 12th Air Force has been vital to mission success.

You are a part of our proud heritage, you have ensured the continued strength of our war fighters, and you have been vital in making 12th Air force the triumphant command it is today. Through your tireless and selfless dedication to your duties, you have accomplished much during your time with us. From our active-duty military and civilians, to our Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve, we have built an integrated team of professionals that has distinguished itself in contingencies as well as peacetime missions.

This is a time of change for us all. I urge you to continue to move forward, striving for the excellence that allows our Air Force to move with confidence into the 21st Century as the world's premiere Air and Space power.

I have been honored to lead you in your triumphs as part of the 12th Air Force team. I am confident you will continue to provide America with the best you have to offer as you realign under 8th Air Force. In this ever-changing world, one thing remains consistent – your outstanding dedication to your profession and your country. Although it is always with a heavy heart we say good-bye to our brothers and sisters in arms, we are all still a part of the same team: the mighty U.S. Air Force.

Sincerely,
Lt. Gen. William Hobbins

Unpredictable security measures counter terrorism

By Tech. Sgt. Fred Spano
355th Security Forces Squadron

To help counter the diverse threat of terrorism, Davis-Monthan maintains a stringent and unpredictable security posture through random antiterrorism measures and an all-encompassing antiterrorism program.

Terrorism is an indiscriminate crime that comes in varying forms of threats and violence intended to attain political goals of one form or another.

Terrorists generate fear through acts of violence, intimidation and coercion. Acts of terrorism such as hijackings and bombings occur routinely in certain parts of the world, making almost anyone a potential victim. Terrorist tactics and techniques are changing and continuously challenge the effectiveness of even the best antiterrorism program.

RAMs target security measures designed to enhance the normal day-to-day installation security

Staff Sgt. Russell Wicke

Airman 1st Class Jeremy Hall, 355th Security Forces Squadron, performs a random inspection at Craycroft gate.

posture. These multiple random security measures constantly change the look of the installation's security posture. RAMs help enhance overall security by removing the predictability associated with normal operations.

They are designed to defeat surveillance attempts and make it more difficult for a terrorist to accurately predict our actions. By removing predictability, terrorists must constantly rethink their actions, making the installation a more difficult target.

Security measures occasionally pose an inconvenience to the base populace, but the added safety greatly outweighs the minimal distractions.

Some examples of the more noticeable RAMs include, but are not limited to:

- ◆ one hundred percent identification checks of drivers and passengers entering the installation
- ◆ monitoring entry and searching commercial vehicles
- ◆ increasing security patrol coverage for sensitive facilities

Antiterrorism is not just the installation's responsibility; force protection responsibility belongs to each individual.

The installation implements RAMs at varied times and locations on a daily basis, but each

D-M member must also take a role in the installation's and their personal safety and security. Individual measures to combat terrorism follow a common sense approach and are easily remembered for many. Measures include:

- ◆ always attempt to maintain a low profile by blending into the local environment
- ◆ dress, conduct and mannerisms should not attract attention
- ◆ be unpredictable and vary your route to and from work, daily routines and timelines
- ◆ be alert and watch for anything out of place

Any inconsistencies should be immediately reported to 355th Security Forces Squadron at 228-4444 or D-M's Office of Special Investigation at 228-5168.

The bottom line is to avoid complacency. For additional information, questions, or possible security enhancements, contact Tech. Sgt. Fred Spano, 355th SFS installation and force protection officer at 228-5349.

Stand on the pillars of leadership

By Col. (Dr.) Carl Alley
355th Medical Group

Courage, commitment and character (the three Cs) form the pillars of effective leadership. All of the other characteristics commonly associated with superior leaders evolve from the application and combination of the three Cs.

The presence or absence of the three pillars of effective leadership impact individually and collectively on the performance of leaders in organizations. These pillars are universal and apply to leaders in peace and war. An excellent example is the battle of Themapoli in 480 BC. The Greeks sent 300 Spartans to fight 3,000 Persians. The Spartans held their position for three days. The super human effort of the Spartans ultimately led to the Greeks defeating the mighty Persian army. It took courage for so few to go and fight so many. It took commitment to stay against insurmountable odds, and it took character to do what was right. This is what leadership is about.

The first pillar of effective leadership is courage. Without courage a leader is paralyzed. Honor, dignity, and self-respect radiate from leaders with the courage to speak out against injustice or unacceptable behavior. Followers recognize such leaders to be honest, trustworthy, and truthful, but most importantly, they have integrity and can be counted on to do the right thing. Effective leaders in great organizations demonstrate integrity through courageous action. Leaders in those organizations take calculated risks when they set goals and provide direction to improve effectiveness. In doing so, standards are established and a vision developed to guide the organization. However, effective leaders know success is achieved through people. People are motivated by leaders who provide a clear vision and lead by example. Leaders willing to take risks, demonstrate legitimate concern for people, provide direction in organizations, and willing to sacrifice everything, rather than lose their integrity, make a difference in peoples' lives and in organizations. Courage is the first pillar of exceptional leadership because it involves a decision to honor commitment regardless of consequences.

The second pillar of effective leadership is commitment. Commitment propels and inspires leaders to persevere. Leaders must not only sell commitment, they must live it. This means leaders must suffer, sacrifice, and persevere under the same circumstances as their followers.

Winning the hearts and minds of followers are critical. Great leaders realize there is no substitute for presence. Followers closely scrutinize the behavior of leaders. There can be no double standard. This is the quickest path to a loss of credibility. People united by credible leadership, and committed to a common cause constitute a powerful force. When people are motivated to action through commitment, they can achieve the impossible. Committed leaders breed that type of enthusiasm and energy. They are self-motivated, determined, and refuse to quit. Abraham Lincoln said, "I have noticed that the generals who can achieve the impossible believe the impossible is achievable."

It all begins with motivated people who believe in the commitment of their leaders. The determined behavior of a committed leader provides the example, and can inspire extraordinary performance.

The third pillar of leadership is character. Character is the essence of the leader. People with character do the right things at the right times for the right reasons. Leaders with character make decisions which benefit their organizations and followers, rather than self-serving. They are internally motivated to make decisions, which help others, improve quality of life, increase effectiveness, develop cooperation, inspire growth, develop potential, satisfy expectations and inspire loyalty.

Great leaders function well under pressure. For many, that is their finest hour. A leader with character is self-motivated and self-disciplined. Opportunities to improve organizational effectiveness, operational capability, or personnel competence are not lost or squandered through indecisiveness or procrastination. They assume responsibility for their actions and the actions of their followers. This is the mark of leaders possessing character. Individual performance and contributions to mission achievement are rewarded accordingly. Leaders who are insensitive to the needs or expectations of followers are destined to fail. This is unacceptable to leaders with character, because they fully understand the impact of morale problems on their organizations. The bottom line is leaders must have a sincere interest in supporting the efforts and well being of their people. Leaders with character are sincere in dealing with others. This is why they are trusted and believed. Without question, leaders who speak well, communicate sincerity, and exemplify the highest standards of moral behavior have a positive impact on the behavior of followers. Only the greatest of the effective leaders possess the character, commitment, and courage to develop their replacements. However, this is the true mark of excellence in leadership.

Effective leaders are different. They, like the Spartans, provide example and develop followers into leaders. The result is the development of organizations which excel in performance.

Air Force, NASCAR teams compete in 'reverse pit stop'

By Col. Dave Thurston
Air Mobility Command Public Affairs

A member from Davis-Monthan Air Force Base participated with Elite teams of highly skilled professionals from National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing and other Air Force members on the flight line at Dover AFB, Del., Sept. 19 in a unique competition dubbed the "Reverse Pit Stop."

D-M's Staff Sgt. David Vollmer, 355th Transportation Squadron vehicle maintenance specialist, did his part to show NASCAR professionals an element of Air Force maintenance.

"Being a mechanic and a huge NASCAR fan, I couldn't have asked for a better opportunity to have fun," said Vollmer. "It was awesome to play the jackman on the 21 car in a real live pit stop."

The purpose of the three-hour event was to demonstrate the many similarities and contrasts between the two organizations and to allow each team to experience something of the other's maintenance challenges.

The Air Force team consisted of six C-5 maintenance personnel from the 436th Airlift Wing, Dover AFB, and six award-winning enlisted members from other Air Mobility Command bases. As the "home team," Dover AFB provided the arena and a massive C-5 Galaxy cargo aircraft and associated equipment to demonstrate Air Force skills.

The legendary Wood Bros. Racing Team that fields the Air Force-sponsored No. 21 Motorcraft Ford represented NASCAR. Owners Eddie and Len Wood came to the base with nine crew members, two show cars and both the primary and back-up cars for Sunday's MBNA "All American Heroes 400" at Dover International Raceway. The cars are painted Air Force blue with pictures of B-1, B-2 and B-52 bomber aircraft on the hood and both sides.

"NASCAR crews and Air Force maintainers share an incredible number of traits," said Col. Scott Wuesthoff, 436th Airlift Wing commander. "Both must be highly trained and skilled, both must practice constantly to achieve great precision and teamwork, and both must have a tremendous winning attitude."

William Plate Jr.

Members of the 436th Airlift Wing showed the No. 21 pit crew how they maintain the C-5 aircraft Sept. 19 on the Dover Air Force Base, Del., flight line for a "reverse pit stop." The members of the No. 21 team showed the members of the 436th Eagle Wing how to perform a pit stop on the racecar.

"Our people do that every day in the War on Terrorism," said Wuesthoff. "This event provided a much-needed break for a few of our troops as well as an opportunity to meet some legendary NASCAR stars."

After initial instructions and safety reminders, the air was filled with the roar of the Ford's engine and the smell of racing fuel and burning rubber as the NASCAR team demonstrated a typical pit stop. After a bit of training and two low-speed practice runs, the Air Force team got to try their hand at a timed two-tire pit stop. The first attempt was something of an eye-opener, but subsequent pit stops were completed in respectable times of 18 to 20 seconds.

Then it was the NASCAR team's turn to try something new as they learned about 28 massive tires and 55,000-gallon gas truck required to service the C-5. Even cleaning the windshield required a trip up four flights of steps on a maintenance stand to reach the front of the giant aircraft.

The day was filled with dialogue between teams, and comparisons of procedures, tools and techniques. At the conclusion, Wuesthoff presented the No. 21 team with Air Force flight suits to wear during Sunday's race, and the Wood Bros. gave each Air Force team member a Motorcraft racing cap.

Dover AFB participants from the 436th Airlift Wing included C-5 crew chiefs Airman 1st Class Alleem Humber and Tech. Sgt. Charles Smith, Jr.; jet engine technicians Airman 1st Class Karen Stypa and Tech. Sgt. Stephen Russell; hydraulic technician Staff Sgt. Kane Swaney; and communication-navigation technician Staff Sgt. Joshua Bowen.

Command award winners participating included: Master Sgt. Craig Limkeman, production superintendent, 733rd Air Mobility Squadron, Kadena Air Base, Japan; Tech. Sgt. Jamie Lanier, jet dispatch expediter, 60th Component Repair Squadron, Travis AFB, Calif.; Tech. Sgt. Robert Zalenski, production superintendent, 729th AMS, Lajes AB, Portugal; Staff Sgt. Patrick Griffin, quality assurance inspector, 61st Airlift Squadron, Little Rock AFB, Ark.; Staff Sgt. Christopher White, EC-135N flying crew chief, 6th Aircraft Generation Squadron, MacDill AFB, Fla.; and Vollmer, Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz.

Note: The mention of private organizations or products in this article does not imply and endorsement by the Air Force.

Aide issues

A young Air Force officer was in a serious car accident, but the only visible permanent injury was to both of his ears, which were amputated. Since he wasn't physically impaired he remained in the Air Force and eventually rose to the rank of general. He was, however, very sensitive about his appearance.

One day the general was interviewing three airmen for his personal aide. The first was an pilot, and it was a great interview. At the end of the interview the general asked him, "Do you notice anything different about me?"

The young officer answered, "Why yes, sir. I couldn't help but notice that you have no ears."

The general got very angry at this lack of tact and threw him out. The second interview was with a female lieutenant, and she was even better.

The general asked her the same question, "Do you notice anything different about me?"

She replied, "Well, sir, you have no ears."

The general threw her out also. The third interview was with a master sergeant. He was articulate, looked extremely sharp and seemed to know more than the two officers combined. The general wanted this guy, and went ahead with the same question, "Do you notice anything different about me?"

To his surprise the master sergeant said, "Yes sir; you wear contact lenses."

The general was very impressed and thought, what an incredibly observant Master sergeant, and he didn't mention my ears.

"And how do you know that I wear contacts?" the general asked.

The sharp-witted master sergeant replied, "Well, sir, it's pretty hard to wear glasses with no ears."

The Rules of the Air

As candidates for Undergraduate Pilot Training, you will be required to memorize the following:

- ◆ Every takeoff is optional. Every landing is mandatory.
- ◆ Flying isn't dangerous. Crashing is what's dangerous.
- ◆ The only time you have too much fuel is when you're on fire.
- ◆ When in doubt, hold on to your altitude. No one has ever collided with the sky.
- ◆ It's always better to be down here wishing you were up there than up there wishing you were down here.

- ◆ A 'good' landing is one from which you can walk away. A 'great' landing is one after which they can use the plane again.
- ◆ You know you've landed with the wheels up if it takes full power to taxi to the ramp.
- ◆ Stay out of clouds. The silver lining everyone keeps talking about might be another airplane going in the opposite direction. Reliable sources also report that mountains have been known to hide out in clouds.
- ◆ Always try to keep the number of landings you make equal to the number of takeoffs you've made.

Quick question

How do you know if there is a fighter pilot at your party?
He'll tell you.

Volleyball Champions

Players battle it out on the new fitness center gym Sept. 19. The 42nd Airborne Command and Control Squadron team took on the team from the 355th Communications Squadron in the final match. 42 ACCS won the match, 20-25, 25-14, 11-4. The regular season ended with 42 ACCS atop the American League at 14-1, followed by COMM at 13-2. The playoffs pitted the top four teams from the American and National leagues in a double elimination format to determine the base intramural volleyball champion. 42 ACCS breezed through the winner's bracket, beat COMM once, and faced off against them again in the final match.

Fitness Factoid

Asthma? You can still exercise and play sports. Check with your provider; medication may be necessary prior to activity. When outdoors, remember to breathe through your nose while exercising- inhaling through your mouth dries the throat and cools it, which can trigger the asthmatic response. If you have asthma, swimming is a good workout. (Courtesy of Fitness and Sports Center)

What’s happening at the D-M clubs

Members First Program

Starting Tuesday Air Force clubs launch Members First, a new program that provides discounts exclusively to club members on items like food purchases, special functions and more. Members receive discounts on meals including holiday buffets and dinners, and on all pro-rated special functions. They will even save 10 percent on all personal functions that are booked at the club. These personal functions include weddings and birthdays. Local clubs may choose to offer their members additional and larger discounts. For more information stop your club or call 228-3301.

Specials for members younger than 21

Your Davis-Monthan clubs offer members younger than 21 years of age half price off all nonalcoholic beverages. In addition, members under 21 who maintain their D-M club membership can also get credit towards their 21st birthday party at the club. Members who maintain club membership for three months receive $75 in club credit, six months receive $150 credit and one year or longer receive $300 in credit. All of this credit can be used towards a 21st birthday party at the club. For more information on under 21 programs, stop by the club or call 228-3301.
